Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****.Excerpt from When Tragedy Grins I Was beginning to feel lonely in this big Hotel Ritz when Countess Larodi came to call upon me in response to Colonel Coster s letter. She s not so good looking as I had been given to believe; but she patted my hand kindly, saying she hoped she would see me often now that I had to come to live in Paris. I shall always feel a special interest in any friend of Colonel Coster s, said she, measuring me from my new blouse to my slippers. You will find that you need many more dresses in Paris than in your own town, she remarked later when she brought up the subject of shopping. Indeed, when I think about it, she talked of little else save dresses and dressmakers, except when she told me of her son, whom she was very anxious I should meet. I am obliged to smile when I think of how Aunty used to say, Never talk of your toilette to strangers, my dear: it s such bad taste. She always thought I was inclined to be vain; but the Countess apparently doesn t think me vain enough. She is going to bring her son here next Monday, and on that evening I am going to dine with them. I m longing to begin my singing lessons. My piano came today, and I have been practising scales all the morning. About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books.
