Excerpt: . has a very handsome church dating from the 14th century, with two tall spires, 250ft., and the celebrated image of N. D. du Pilier. There are also a museum of antiquities, and some Roman remains. The line from St. L6 is continued to Coutances, seep. 89. From Lison it is 13 miles to Carentan (Stat.), a small port, not without interest in English history. When Henry I. came to Normandy, in 1105, to put down various disturbances, he landed at a port called Barbaflot, and on Easier Eve found quarters in the village of Carentan, on the fords of the Vire, where he rested for awhile. Serlo, Bishop of Se es, met the king at Carentan, and preached to him a long sermon chiefly upon the distresses produced throughout the country because of Robert Curthose s inefficiency as a ruler. Alas, said Serlo,...
