The character of complete revelator ascribed here to Jesus is explained by His intimate and personal relation with God Himself, such as is described in the following words: who is in the bosom of the Father. The participle 6 uv, who is, is connected in a very close logical relation with the following verb: He has revealed. As Baumlein says, it is equivalent to on iv, inasmuch as He is; thereupon rests His competency to reveal. --The figure which John employs might be derived from the position of two. nearest guests at a banquet (xiii. 23); but it seems rather to be borrowed from the position of a son seated on his father's knees and resting on his bosom. It is the emblem of a complete opening of the heart; he who occupies this place in relation to God must know the most secret...
